

CBA petition, CG docket #02-278

Hello my name is Deborah Cross and I am speaking for several members of my family and friends when I tell you that we DO NOT want the FCC to allow the CBA and it's members to call us (in Indiana) with their "availability of more favorable interest rates". If they feel that we need this information, have them post it on their bank signs, in our credit cards statements, or in the local newspaper. They have so many other options than using our own telephones to annoy us. Have they offered to pay everyone's telephone bills if they are allowed to invade our homes with their calls?! Then, and only then should they have the right to use our phones in the manner they are requesting. We certainly don't pay our monthly phone bill so that we can supply telemarketers with the means to bother us at our expense. We feel that this is an invasion of our homes and would be very disappointed if the FCC grants their preemption. If they feel that Indiana's laws cause "costly and cumbersome effort" and "creates a substantial compliance burden" why doesn't the FCC simply make this Indiana law a Federal law. I'm sure that most Americans would appreciate not receiving this type of call; I know that the majority of Hoosiers certainly do.
